Providence Care receives national recognition for quality care

Kingston – December 22, 2009 – Providence Care has been awarded three-year Accreditation certification by Accreditation Canada, based on the results of a comprehensive survey process and an on-site inspection in November 2009.

Dale Kenney, President and CEO for Providence Care was advised of this national recognition and was congratulated for the “organization’s leadership, staff commitment, and organization-wide quest for improvement” and for the “commitment to providing quality care and service.”

“To obtain our continued Accreditation status, we go through rigorous quality control checks and measures,” says Kenney. “This achievement is a reflection of the commitment of our staff, physicians, board and volunteers to providing quality care and exceptional service in our community.”

The Accreditation process involves months of self-assessment by staff, client and corporate service teams. Then, Accreditation Canada Surveyors came on-site for four days to review documentation, conduct interviews and focus group meetings with various stakeholders and tour the facilities. ‘Tracers’ are a new feature of the site survey and that process has surveyors, accompanied by a staff person, following or “tracing” the path of a patient or client, or an administrative process, to see first hand how an organization operates and to evaluate the quality and safety of the services we provide. It often includes discussions with staff and patients.

“Overall, we scored an impressive 97% across the Quality Dimensions that Accreditation Canada measures, including safety, efficiency, accessibility and client-centered services,” says Beth Simons-Chambers, Accreditation Coordinator for Providence Care. “It’s the hard work and consistent attention to quality and safety from staff that account for these results. While we are very pleased with this acknowledgement, Accreditation is about continuous improvement and we will continue to look for opportunities to improve in the future.”

“The organization has a long and rich history of mission and value based care which is embedded in the organization’s ‘DNA’”
